Biography

Ernest Godes Hurtado was born on October 11, 1896, in Mediana de San Pedro, Barcelona, Catalonia, Spain to parents Artur Godes Caballeria and Emilia Hurtado Giró ^{[1][2][3]}. His father, Artur, was born on April 6, 1868, in Fonollar, Barcelona ^[1], while his mother, Emilia, was born on April 29, 1872, in Cuch, Barcelona ^[1]. Ernest was baptized on October 18, 1896, at Parròquia de St. Francesc de Paula ^{[1][2][3]}. He had six siblings: Emili, Rosa, Mercedes (also referred to as Mercé), Josep Maria, Ramón, and Artur ^{[1][2]}.

Ernest married Dolores Molina Beca, who was born on September 8, 1899, in Cabra, Córdoba, Andalusia, Spain ^{[1][2][3]}. They were wed in 1925 in Córdoba ^{[1][2][3]}. The couple was blessed with five children: Dolores, Ernesto, María Mercedes, Eloísa (also known as María Luisa), and Enrique ^{[1][2][3]}.

Professionally, Ernest served as the manager of the stevedores at the port of Tarragona for the shipping company José Tayá and was also the owner of a sawmill ^[1]. He lived in Bilbao from March 1, 1939, until October 1, 1939, before moving to Avenida de José Antonio (Gran Vía), Madrid, where he resided until his death ^[1].

Ernest passed away from leukemia on January 8, 1949, at the age of 52, in his home on Avenida de José Antonio, Madrid ^{[1][2][3]}. He was interred at Cementerio de la Almudena in Madrid ^{[1][2][3]}.

Historical Context

Ernest Godes Hurtado was born into a Spain gripped by political transformation. His birth in 1896 came at the tail end of the Restoration period, a time when the Bourbon monarchy had been restored after a brief First Spanish Republic. The country was characterized by its turno pacífico system, where power alternated between two main parties to maintain stability. Ernest's early years would have seen the growing tensions leading up to the Tragic Week of 1909, an event that reflected social unrest in Catalonia, his place of birth.

When Ernest married Dolores Molina Beca in 1925, Spain was undergoing significant changes. King Alfonso XIII faced increasing opposition, and the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera (1923-1930) attempted to suppress regional nationalisms and labor movements. By the time of their marriage, there was a return to civilian government, but the seeds for further conflict were sown, eventually leading to the Second Spanish Republic in 1931 and the tumultuous years preceding the Spanish Civil War (1936-1939).

Professionally, Ernest's role as a manager of stevedores placed him within the important maritime industry during a volatile period for Spain. The shipping sector was crucial for both military logistics and trade, especially during the interwar period and the Spanish Civil War. His move to Bilbao in March 1939 coincided with the final phase of the war, as Franco's forces consolidated control over Spain. Post-war, he settled in Madrid, which under Franco became the center of autarkic economic policies aimed at self-sufficiency and reconstruction.

Ernest passed away from leukemia in 1949, a decade after the civil war ended. This era saw Spain internationally isolated due to its authoritarian regime, although it slowly began to reintegrate with Western powers towards the end of the 1940s. Domestically, the post-war period was marked by repression and economic hardship, with rationing and political purges being common. Ernest's death occurred just before the beginning of the Spanish Miracle, a period of economic liberalization and growth that started in the late 1950s.

Last Name Origins

The surname 'Godes' could be of Germanic origin, derived from the personal name 'Godizo', which is composed of the elements 'god', meaning 'good' or 'god', and 'izo', a diminutive suffix. The element 'Hurtado' is of Spanish origin and is likely a patronymic surname derived from the medieval personal name 'Furtado'. The name 'Furtado' itself comes from the Latin 'fortis', meaning 'strong'. In combination, 'Godes Hurtado' may have originated as a compound surname indicating descent from a person named Godizo who was characterized by strength.

While 'Godes' suggests a Germanic root related to the personal name 'Godizo', the component 'Caballeria' has a distinct origin. It is derived from the Spanish word 'caballería', referring to a measure of land or the status of knighthood in medieval Spain. This part of the surname might indicate an association with knights or landholding, possibly signifying that an ancestor held a knightly rank or owned a specific amount of land known as 'caballería'. Therefore, 'Godes Caballeria' would combine the lineage from a person named Godizo with a historical connection to knighthood or land tenure.

Consistency Issues

1. The name 'Mercedes' appears as 'Mercé' in source ^[2].
2. Eloísa is also referred to as 'María Luisa' in source ^[3].
3. There are discrepancies in individual IDs across sources.
