Biography

Artur Godes Hurtado was born on August 19, 1917, at Plaça Figuerola, 4, bajos Barcelona, to parents Artur Godes Caballeria and Emilia Hurtado Giró ^{[1][2]}. His father, Artur, was born on April 6, 1868, in Fonollar, 30 4o Barcelona ^[1], and his mother, Emilia, was born on April 29, 1872, in Cuch, 5 4o ^[1]. He was baptized on September 2, 1917, at the Church of La Bonanova ^[1].

Artur had six siblings: Emili, Ernest, Rosa, Mercedes (also known as Mercé), Josep Maria, and Ramón ^{[1][2]}.

He lived at Plaça Figuerola, 4, baixos, Barcelona from his birth until 1919. From 1919 to 1925, he resided at Bertrán, 67, Barcelona. Then, from April 1925 to 1935, he moved to Bertrán, 39, Barcelona. Between 1936 and 1950, he lived at Bertrán, 63, Barcelona, and after marrying, from 1950 to 1971, he settled at Bertrán, 80 2o, Barcelona. Finally, from 1971 until his death in 1993, he lived at Bertrán, 77-79, Barcelona ^[1].

After 1936, Artur served in the military, initially going to Córdoba for training and subsequently to the Teruel front during the Spanish Civil War, where he experienced the hardships of war as a 'Tinent pagador' ^[1].

Artur married Carmen Schmid Tarrida, who was born in November 1925. They were wed in 1950 at Bertrán, 80 2o Barcelona ^[1]. The couple had two children: Carmen and Artur ^[1].

Artur Godes Hurtado passed away on October 9, 1993, at the age of 76 years, in Bertrán, 77 - 79 Barcelona ^[1] ^[2].

Historical Context

Artur Godes Hurtado was born into the tumultuous backdrop of early 20th century Spain, a period marked by political instability that would eventually lead to the Spanish Civil War (1936-1939). Born on August 19, 1917, in Barcelona, Artur's early years were spent in a city known for its cultural vibrancy and industrial significance. His parents, Artur Godes Caballeria and Emilia Hurtado Giró, welcomed him during a time when Spain was grappling with issues of national identity and modernization.

As Artur reached adulthood, Spain was deeply divided between the Republicans, who supported a leftist, secular, and democratic republic, and the Nationalists, led by General Francisco Franco, advocating conservative and traditionalist principles. The conflict erupted into full-scale civil war following a failed military coup in July 1936. Artur served as a 'Tinent pagador' in the military, enduring the hardships of the Teruel front, one of the most bitterly contested and significant battles of the war.

After the war, which ended with Franco's victory and the establishment of a dictatorship, Spain entered a period of repression and international isolation. Despite these challenges, Artur married Carmen Schmid Tarrida in 1950, and they started a family amidst the slow recovery of post-war Spain. During this era, Spain saw significant changes, including economic reforms in the 1950s and 1960s that spurred industrial growth and urban development, particularly in cities like Barcelona where Artur and his family resided.

Living through the latter half of Franco's regime, Artur witnessed Spain's gradual opening to the world and transition back to democracy after Franco's death in 1975. This period also saw Catalonia's resurgence in cultural and political autonomy, which may have impacted Artur's final years in Barcelona. He passed away on October 9, 1993, just over a decade after Spain joined the European Economic Community in 1986, marking its full integration into the European community.

Last Name Origins

The surname 'Godes Hurtado' is likely a compound surname, combining two distinct family names. The first part, 'Godes,' could be of Germanic origin, derived from the personal name 'Godizo,' which itself comes from the word 'god,' meaning good or god-like. Alternatively, it might have Jewish origins, as 'Godes' can also be found in Sephardic Jewish communities, possibly an adaptation of a Hebrew name. The second part, 'Hurtado,' is of Spanish origin and means 'stolen' or 'hidden.' It was often used to denote someone who had been kidnapped or perhaps had gone into hiding. This surname combination suggests a lineage that may have both Germanic and Spanish roots, with the possibility of Jewish ancestry.

The surname 'Godes Caballeria' is another compound surname. While 'Godes' has the same potential origins as previously mentioned—either Germanic or Jewish—the 'Caballeria' component is distinctly Spanish, deriving from 'caballero,' meaning knight or horseman. It refers to someone of knightly status or one who worked as a cavalryman. The combination of 'Godes' and 'Caballeria' would suggest a family history that blends cultural elements, potentially indicating ancestors who were recognized for their status or occupation in medieval Spain, along with the possible Germanic or Jewish heritage associated with the 'Godes' element.

Consistency Issues

1. The name of one sibling is listed as both Mercedes and Mercé across sources ^{[1][2]}.
2. There are discrepancies in the birth date of Rosa Pujol Pont between sources; one source lists it as July 6, 1899, while another lists it as July 3, 1899 ^{[1][2]}.
